Speech-Language Pathologist – Hello There

Description

The Hello Foundation is a progressive, fun-loving, student-focused company that provides high-quality service to students, districts, and families. Unlike many other companies, we hire all of our SLPs as employees with benefits and we give you the choice of which district to work for.

School districts come to The Hello Foundation searching for an SLP who can have a positive influence on their students and staff. We pride ourselves on consistently providing what districts need, where and when they need it. We developed the Hello There hybrid telepractice model to give rural districts access to highly qualified providers and to allow our clinicians to deliver online services most of the month without losing the benefits that come from being in the building every so often.

Our clinicians have a few things in common: they're dedicated to kids, they're flexible, they're always learning, and they're ridiculously adventurous. If these describe you, then read on.

Responsibilities

You will perform all of the duties of a school-based SLP utilizing a hybrid service model consisting of traditional in-person services and telepractice services.

Responsibilities include, but are not limited to:

- Employing best practices in individual and group treatment
- Monitoring and evaluating student progress
- Tracking data for progress reports and treatment planning
- Completing all special education paperwork in a timely manner (including case management)
- Attending and leading IEP meetings
- Completing evaluations and writing reports
- Billing Medicaid when requested
- Collaborating and consulting with teachers and parents
- Supervising and mentoring speech assistants and/or SLPAs
- Working with volunteers and/or students

Expectations

- You will work 160 hours/month for full-time employees.
- You will work from home approximately 3 weeks per month.
- You will travel up to one week per month to be on-site in your district in Oregon, Washington, Alaska, Wyoming, Montana, or California. Some placements travel much less than this and some placements have no travel.
- You will have a personal computer with teleconferencing capability.
- You will have consistent and reliable high-speed internet access for teleconferencing.
- You will be an active member of the Hello Foundation community, including attendance at events and regular participation in discussions via our intranet.
